firmed-Drunkenness, Inefliciency, Disorder and Vilo Language Alleged to have been Customary at the House-Total Lack of Disci-

When the council committee on fire department met last night the special order was the inquiry into the removal by Chief Healy, of the fire de-partment, of Tom Rose as foreman of the Eighth ward engine, and the ap-pointment of George Butler to the vacancy. Before this matter came up, however, Capt. Otto called attention to the rotter condition of the floor of the Vigilant engine house. All agreed that it was in a bad and dangerous condition, and that the ventilation of the house was also bad. Mr. Waterhouse moved the appointment of a sub-committee of three to have the floor repaired at once, the pay to come out of the coming ap-the pay to come out of the coming appropriation. The committee is composed of Messrs. Waterhouse, Otto and Zwicker. They were instructed also to look into the matter of ventilation.

This matter being disposed of, Mr. Rose was [called in. He made a statement that the chief had called for his resignation, saying it was demanded by several Ropublican councilmen. He explained the circumstances out of which he supposed the complaints grow. He denied that men wont into saloons while on duty. In answer to seloons while on duty. In answer to questions he also explained a case when he had trouble with the engineer on the occasion of a still alarm from a fire at Mrs. Hahne's, the latter being late in arrival and blackguarding the witness when he did arrive. The diver he when he did arrive. The driver, he said, had not had much experience, and said, had not had much experience, and he told of several fires, concerning which there had been criticism of the Eighth ward engine's service, and narrated the unfavorable circumstances under which these fires happened—notably the tea-store and old Holliday planing mill blazes.

The general discipline at the house, he said, had been "pretty mixed," for the reason that there was a set of men employed there who could neither agree between themselves nor with him. He told of one dispute he had with the pipe man, and this brought out some very interesting questions and answers as to who was responsible for the lack of discipline. Rose told of several times he had reported infractions of the rules. Two of these reports led to the removal of two men, one of whom, George Butler, was appointed again when Rose was removed.

During the late city campaign, he said, one of the men (understood to be Henry Frohme) had been off several days, and was taking a very deep interest in the election. He was off by the chief's permission, and there was no substitute on in his place. Butler, the witness said, was the best driver there was ever in the house, and a good firefighter. There were people, however, in the force who were no more fit to be firemen than was a spittoon.

in the force who were no more fit to be firemen than was a spittoon.

A great deal of per-onality was induled in while Rose was on the stand, and he was followed by Dr. J. W. Mc-Coy, late city health officer.

The doctor said he thought all the men in the engine house, without exception, drank too much. He had never seen Rose intoxicated, and he was steady and faithful in his attention to his duand faithful in his attention to his du-ties during his hours. The witness had, as a neighbor of the house, telt security from the fact that Tom Rose was there; he was a valuable man in any department, and the doctor considered him the best man, and said all the residents of the ward considered him the best man, by all odde, that ever was in the house.

Dr. J. H. Pinas and he had a transfer the said the

Dr. J. H. Pipes said be had observed the engine house service. He thought there was too much drinking among all of the men. He paid Rosea high compliment, saying he was always at his post, and he looked upon him as one of the best firemen that was ever in the ward. He said that Goorge Butler, sober, was a first class man, and haif drunk was the best driver ever employed in the house. Since the reappointment of Butler he has been as sober as a judge, and doesn't look like the same man. The doctor thought if one saloon could secure all the trade of the fire department in the Eighth ward Dr. J. H. Pipes said he had observed the fire department in the Eighth ward it would get a pretty good business, without any other source of revenue.

Harry Stewart, an Eighth ward drug-gist, praised Rose's promptness and effi-ciency. They were always ringing the bell for other attaches, but not for Rose. bell for other attaches, but not for Rose. He had never seen Kose drunk, but had seen all the men go into saloons. There had been a good deal of complaint about noise and disorder about the house and especially so on Sunday. He considered George Butler as fine a driver as he ever knew, and since Butler went in the last time there had been no noise. He heard Butler had ordered a man out for swearing in the house, which was something that would surprise the uatives.

Chief Healy—I assure you profanity will be stopped there.

Mr. Seybold, a painter who lives just next door to the engine house, eald there had been too much noise and swearing there. But that he had feared to make enemies, he would have reported the matter. His wife and children had several times to go out of their He had never seen Rose drunk, but had ed the matter. His wife and children had several times to go out of their yard and shut themselves in the house to keep from hearing the vile language used. Sometimes people gathered in a crowd clear across the street, attracted by quarreling, which if it had occurred on the street would have caused the arrest of the men. Rose, he said, had always been on hand to answer to alarms; sometimes the other men were not. This witness gave both Rose and Butler good repute as firemen.

Charles Bryson, who lives just across from the hose house, said the discipline there had not been good; there was the best driver in the department was the best driver in the department.

the house and outside in front. Butler was the best driver in the denartment when sober, and when half drink could drive better than most men. He said Rose was always on hand; he had seen him when he was drink, and on duty.

A letter was read from William Radcliff, giving Rose a good send off, and the case was closed.

the case was closed.

The discussion took a wide range, and according personal. Mr. Hahne said he had seen one member of the force drunk since the new foreman went on duty, but when Chief Healy demanded the name refused to give it. Mr. Wuterloves thought the way not diffiling. house thought this was not fulfilling a committeenan's duty, Mr. Hahne said he was not going to be a tale tearer. Later Mr. Waterhouse made a reference to "spitework," which roused Mr. Hahne's ire. Mr. Water-the great cough cure.

BAD STATE OF AFFAIRS

I house said he had seen the engineer last Sunday, when he thought he was drunk. Several of the members expressed the opinion that Engineer Boles ought to join Rose in retirement, and Mr. Hahue moved that every man in the house except Foreman Butler be discharged. Finally, the removal of Rose and the appointment of Butler was confirmed by a unanimous vote of all the eight members, and further action was postponed so as to give Chief Healy an opportunity to exercise his discretion and report at the next meeting.

EVER GIVEN UNDER ARION AUSPICES

The Masquers Numbered Over Two Hundred, and Three Hundred Others Enjoyed the Evening's Amusement-A Description of the Brilliant Scene-Some of the Notable Costumes-The "SI Plunkard"

Last night the Arion masquerade carnival took place at the society's handsome club house on South Main street, and the general expression of opinion was that it was the most successful and enjoyable function ever given under Arion auspices, not even excluding the opening ball of the society several years ago. The attendance was very large, nearly every mem-ber of the society being present. The masquers numbered about 200 and 300 others were interested spectators of the animated scene on the dancing floor, that for brilliancy and amusing features was a record breaker.

The members, en masque, began to arrive at the hall about 8 o'clock, but arrive at the hall about 8 o'clock, but the first number on the programme that was of general interest was the grand march that took place at 9 p. m., headed by the directors of the Arion in Japanese and Spanish costumes. The other merry makers to the number of about one hundred also took part in the march. At its conclusion the prince of the carnival (Dr. Burdatts) made a speech that was full of happy hits at current events and evoked great applause. Ho held up the legislature, city council and wintry weather and other current topics to the ridicule of his listeners.

From the conclusion of the grand march to the hour of discarding masks, 11:30, the scene on the main floor was one of great brilliancy and interest. The costumes, many of them being brought from Baltimore especially for the occasion, were unusually fine and handsome. One of the principal features, some say the feature, was the "Si Plunkard" band, Hore was an aggregation of alleged musicians with wheezy instruments who were equal to the occasion in all respects. They alternated between the dancing floor and the parlors on the lower floor, and wherever they went they had an overwhelming accompaniment—of noise. whelming accompaniment—of noise. These gentlemen held down parts in the "jay" band with great ability: George F. Diez, leader; Harry Ritter, Charles Woebber, Andrew Seifert, Louis Juergans, Louis Lally, Henry Meyer, J. Kuntz and N. A. Kovelan.

Among the other notable costumes

Among the other notable costnmes were those of the fourteen poung ladies who posed as "tars" of Uncle Sam's navy. White freeks and blue caps formed their uniform. John Lutz had one of the best; he was dressed as a Coxeyite, and although he had no mask Coxoyite, and although he had no mask was unrecognized by many intimates who were present. The Mikado of Japan, Queen "Lil," the German Kaiser and other dignitaries rubbed elbows with Herr Most, John L. Sullivan and "Sockless Jerry" Simpson, while a few feet away a Japanese belle was fraternizing with a Celestial Mandarin, unmindulation of the society of the second secon ing with a Celestial Mandarin, unmindful of the modern day duel their nations are now indulging in. Frances E. Willard and Steve Brodie, of bridge jumping frame, were prominent figures on the dancing floor and seemed to enjoy each other's society.

At 11:30 the masks were removed and and many were the surprises that resulted. The discarding of the masks did not end the evening's amusement, however, as the dancing continued until an early hour this morning. The Arion can well feel proud of last night's success.
